Board Mission

With opposition to U.S.-led sanctions against Russia rising and with sanctions against Iran and companies doing business with it about to be reinvented, the position of the AmCham becomes more precarious. More than ever, we need to find a balance between supporting U.S. foreign policy and addressing the concerns of those whom it affects negatively. Our independence as an organization is put to the test. I have always prided myself on separating my own business and personal interests from those of the Chamber and its members, and I vow to continue to do this if re-elected.
